

Fashion
On the Edge
Lace
Leather and Feathers

The New Androgyny

Dangerous Beauty

Jessica Chastain Like You've Never Seen Her Before

NIP/TUCK

Forehead

A-listers from as far as London and Los Angeles head to the Sydney cosmetic physician Joseph Hkeik for his finesse with fillers. A trained sculptor, he approaches faces with an artist's eye and claims he can erase 10 years in one session. (allsaintscosmedical.com.au)

Cheeks

Santa Monica plastic surgeon Chia Chi Kao's endoscopic Ponytail Facelift involves very little cutting and virtually no pulling. Kao re-drapes skin and soft tissue vertically and uses tiny stitches to tighten underlying muscles. He then contours and volumizes with a fine layer of regenerative-cell-rich fat taken from the patient's own body. (kaoplasticsurgery.com)

Lips and Chin

The Euro jetset flock to Antonios Paraskevas, who splits his time between Paris and his native Athens, Greece. With a background in advanced reconstructive surgery, he's known for some of the best lip and chin sculpting money can buy. (doctorparaskevas.com)

Breasts

In Brazil, where plastic surgeons are often as famous as the people they operate on, it's refreshing to find one who prefers to stay under the radar. Benjamin de Souza Gomes Filho, whose office is located in Vitória, a quick flight from Rio de Janeiro, works on oodles of celebs, models, and moguls—but you'd never know it. His way with breasts, in particular, is gorgeously subtle. (centrodecurgiaplastica.com)

Calves and Ankles

Many Korean women eschew muscular calves (ankles are practically outlawed) and seek out calf reduction or leg-slimming procedures. Excellent clinics abound, but Dream Plastic Surgery, in Seoul, turns out some of the shapeliest gams in town. (en.e-dream.co.kr)

Eyes

The ophthalmic plastic surgeon Naresh Joshi is fashionable London's go-to guy for eyes, period. It's all he does. A self-described obsessive-compulsive perfectionist, Joshi specializes in complex procedures—and has performed more than 15,000 surgeries. (bupacromwellhospital.com)

Nose

Rising rhinoplasty star David W. Kim, a San Francisco surgeon, attracts tech titans, West Coast socials, and other highfliers with his technical virtuosity and conservative approach (ski jumps, after all, are so 20 years ago). "A good rhinoplasty looks like you were born with it," he says. (drkimfacialplastics.com)

Neck

London's Dirk Kremer eradicates "turkey neck" with a combination of liposuction and something called the iGuide neck lift, which uses long needles and thread to weave a "net" that helps support sagging jawline muscles. (harleystreetaesthetics.com)

Stomach

After an "abdominoplasty flankplasty" by West Orange, New Jersey, body-work maestro Scott Spiro, his yummy-mummy patients often end up looking better than they did pre-pregnancy. And it's not all about appearances: Afterward, "they can hold a plank longer than they could before they had children," he says. (drspiro.com)

Thighs and Butt

"There's a revolution going on in buttock surgery," says Constantino G. Mendieta, a Miami plastic surgeon who hits mostly below the belt. "Ten years ago, surgeons didn't look at the area artistically, but now everyone wants a prettier, shapelier butt." His own posterior paradigm? Instagram selfie sensation Jen Selter. (constantinomendieta.com)

BIT BY BIT

FLAT RUMP? POST-BABY BUMP? SOMEWHERE IN THE WORLD THERE'S A DOC WHO CAN FIX THAT. SANDRA BALLENTINE MAPS OUT THE BEST.

